CONSTRUCTING A NEW ‘U’

Likins will ask Regents for $500 tuition increase

By Andrea Kelly

In the past few years, President Peter Likins has wanted to raise UA’s tuition to about $500 per credit hour. But he will be adding on to last year’s record-setting $1,000 tuition hike, which will be added on to last year’s record-setting $500 tuition hike. Likins will ask the Board of Regents for $500 next year, which will be added on to last year’s record-setting $1,000 tuition hike. This year he may finally meet that goal.

Likins said he will request a tuition increase of $500 next year, which will be added on to last year’s record-setting $1,000 tuition hike.

The increase would bring full-time resident undergraduate tuition to about $4,090, the same as the University of Oregon, which charges the 34th highest tuition among the top 50 selective public universities this year.

The UA could drop in the rankings next year if other universities raise their tuition this year. Even if the UA raises the top of the bottom one-third percent this year, or about the 34th spot, students could still face another tuition hike next year in order to stay in that position.

“Five hundred dollars is the amount that would spur growth and development,” said Michael Delahanty, senior parking program coordinator. “We want to put an incentive out there to stop people from doing this. It is easy to spot tailgaters.”

Last semester, there were about 30 tailgaters caught, compared to 96 last year.

Drivers who do not have parking permits or have not put their ticket into the ticket machine usually rush out after someone else who has paid, Delahanty said.

In addition to cameras at the exits, FTS has placed people in certain areas of the parking garages to get tailgaters’ license plate numbers, which FTS will then run through a database to see if the vehicle is registered to have a permit.

The ticket machine is also checked to see if the driver put their ticket in. If the vehicle does not have a permit or a ticket was not used, the owner is fined.

“Permit holders were complaining because they made an investment,” Delahanty said.

Delahanty said the number of drivers caught tailgating this year went up compared to last year.

20-year-old pleads guilty for attempted sexual exploitation of a minor

By Holly Wells

A UA student has pleaded guilty to charges of downloading child pornography and sharing the material over the Internet while he lived in a campus residence hall last fall, officials said.

Donilo Phillip Colich, 20, was charged with one count of attempted sexual exploitation of a minor under 15, a class 2 felony, according to UAPD Sgt. Eugene Mejia.

Colich, originally indicted on 11 counts, received 10 years of probation last week, which includes no access to children and the Internet. He will also have to register as a sex offender, said Assistant County Attorney Kathleen Maeye.

On Nov. 12, 2002, an unknown person from Switzerland notified the UA webmaster that Colich had been using the Kazaa file-sharing program to download child pornography in his room in the Manzanita-Mohave Residence Hall, 1010 N.

The webmaster notified the computer

The head of the history department and a former chairman of the UA faculty has been appointed to key jobs in the Office of the Provost, where they will oversee faculty development and retention as well as general education and teaching.

Provost George Davis announced yesterday that Juan Garcia, head of the history department, will take over as vice provost for academic affairs.

Jerrold Hogle, a distinguished professor of English, will fill the new post of vice provost for instruction.

Over the summer, President Peter Likins announced that several vice provosts are the latest step in a reorganization of administrative reorganization eliminating the job of vice president for under-graduate education.

Hogle will be the first person to hold the position of vice provost for instruction, which was created last year after an administrative reorganization eliminated the job of vice president for under-graduate education.

Garcia and Hogle’s appointments are the latest step in a reorganization of the university’s senior administrators.

Garcia will work with deans and department heads on faculty development and will oversee retention and recruitment efforts. He steps in for Elizabeth Ervin, who retired over the summer.

Jerrold Hogle, a distinguished professor of English, will take over as the job of vice provost for instruction.

The increase would bring full-time resident undergraduate tuition to about $4,090, the same as the University of Oregon, which charges the 34th highest tuition among the top 50 selective public universities this year.

The UA could drop in the rankings next year if other universities raise their tuition this year. Even if the UA reaches the top of the bottom one-third percentile this year, or about the 34th spot, students could still face another tuition hike next year in order to stay in that position.

“Five hundred dollars is the amount that would spur growth and development,” said Michael Delahanty, senior parking program coordinator. “We want to put an incentive out there to stop people from doing this. It is easy to spot tailgaters.”

Last semester, there were about 30 tailgaters caught, compared to 96 last year.

Drivers who do not have parking permits or have not put their ticket into the ticket machine usually rush out after someone else who has paid, Delahanty said.

In addition to cameras at the exits, FTS has placed people in certain areas of the parking garages to get tailgaters’ license plate numbers, which FTS will then run through a database to see if the vehicle is registered to have a permit.

The ticket machine is also checked to see if the driver put their ticket in. If the vehicle does not have a permit or a ticket was not used, the owner is fined.

“Permit holders were complaining because they made an investment,” Delahanty said.

Delahanty said the number of drivers caught tailgating this year went up compared to last year.