Preceding story, page 13

The University of Arizona, Tucson

Wildcat.arizona.edu

Wildcat, Arizona Daily Wildcat,

Since 1899 — The University of Arizona, Tucson

Today's Weather

Mostly Sunny

High: 72

Low: 41

QUICK HITS

ASUA senate still plans to hold impeachment hearing

The purpose of the impeachment hearing is to hold an impeachment hearing for ASUA President Cade Bernsen but are unsure when the hearing will take place, sources said.

“We’re still trying to figure out the right procedure,” said Sen. Matt Boepple, a political science sophomore. The meeting will not take place tonight’s senate meeting.

The hearing was previously set for Dec. 7, but was postponed indefinitely due to a technicality in the Associated Students of the University of Arizona constitution.

The ASUA Supreme Court, according to the ASUA constitution, must try any ASUA official impeached within two weeks of the decision. The senate decided to hold an impeachment hearing after Bernsen was accused of allegedly sexual harassment against a ASUA official.

Bernsen has denied the allegations, calling them “false” in a Dec. 1 statement.

BOOKSTORE BLUES

Matt Loehman

resigns from post

A student government senator resigned last week after an MRI revealed his spinal cord was not healing properly from a November surgery, forcing him to return to Tucson last week to undergo a second procedure to fix the problem.

Associated Students of the University of Arizona Sen. Matt Loehman resigned from his senatorial position last week and will return to classes for the school semester.

Since last July, he has been suffering from spinal stiffness, a condition in which the spinal cord becomes narrowed, limiting circulation in the arms and legs.

Loehman said his condition had worsened significantly since mid-December, causing him to lose a lot of the independence he had gained through post-surgery rehabilitation. Much of his strength and coordination deteriorated, making it hard for him to walk or grip a pen.

Last week, Loehman returned to Tucson to undergo a second surgery, which he said was successful.

“The doctors were able to decompress my spinal cord by removing an extensive amount of scar tissue, which the first surgery wasn’t able to do,” said Loehman, a business junior, who will be at University Medical Center for another week before returning home to New Mexico for outpatient recovery.

ASUA will continue working without Loehman, whose voice and decision-making power in carrying out projects will be sorely missed, said Sen. Patrick Cook, a pre-education sophomore.

Loehman plans to return to the UA for summer school, but considers his resignation and break from school the responsible thing to do at this point.

A replacement has not been named for Loehman and it is the job of President Cade Bernsen to appoint a new senator.

Both Loehman and his doctors agree he should take a break from classes to minimize waiting time.

Likins returns after surgery

President treated for kidney stones, given pacemaker during New Year’s

By Nicole Sanchez

Arizona Daily Wildcat

New Year’s is usually marked as a festive occasion with people partying the night away with music, dancing and plenty of drinking. This annual trial is a way for us to say goodbye to the old year and welcome the new.

But this New Year’s was different for UA President Peter Likins, who spent the last three nights of 2005 quietly recuperating after surgery at the University Medical Center.

Likins admitted himself to University Medical Center Dec. 29 for a routine treatment of a suspected kidney stone and underwent a procedure to remove the kidney stone Dec. 30 according to a press release.

A physical assessment prior to the Dec. 30 surgery revealed the need for Likins to have a pacemaker, which was successfully implanted on Dec. 31, the release said.

Likins said that from a doctor’s perspective, the two surgeries he underwent were routine, even though it had to be done in the month of December, causing him to lose a lot of the independence he had gained through post-surgery rehabilitation.

Much of his strength and coordination deteriorated, making it hard for him to walk or grip a pen.

Last week, Loehman returned to Tucson to undergo a second surgery, which he said was successful.

“The doctors were able to decompress my spinal cord by removing an extensive amount of scar tissue, which the first surgery wasn’t able to do,” said Loehman, a business junior, who will be at University Medical Center for another week before returning home to New Mexico for outpatient recovery.

ASUA will continue working without Loehman, whose voice and decision-making powers in carrying out projects will be sorely missed, said Sen. Patrick Cook, a pre-education sophomore.

Loehman plans to return to the UA for summer school, but considers his resignation and break from school the responsible thing to do at this point.

A replacement has not been named for Loehman and it is the job of President Cade Bernsen to appoint a new senator.

Both Loehman and his doctors agree he should take a break from classes to minimize waiting time.

‘Bear Down’ composer dies

Jack Lee served as band director for 33 years

By Seth Mauzy

Arizona Daily Wildcat

A piece of the university’s musical heritage was lost over the holiday break as Jack Kenneth Lee, former UA director of bands and composer of the school’s fight song, died Dec. 23 of Alzheimer’s disease. He was 84.

Lee served as the UA’s director of bands for 33 years, bringing prestige and notoriety to the Pride of Arizona Marching Band as a member of the American Bandmasters Association, and touched the lives of more than 2,000 students who played under his direction.

Lee began his legacy at the UA in 1952, when the then-associate marching band director at the University of Michigan flew to Tucson to interview for the job of director of bands at the UA.

On the return flight, Lee noticed the motto “Bear Down,” painted on the roof of the Bear Down Gymnasium, and he spent the rest of the flight composing a tune that would become the most well-known song on campus.

Lee had his hands full as director of bands at the UA. He directed the marching and symphonic bands as well as The Hepcats, a jazz combo that played at basketball games and other smaller events that would later become the pep band.

“He was such a multitalented individual,” said Alice Lee, page 16