Dean: Big turnout key for Kerry

By Jennifer Amler
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

Howard Dean was the guest of honor at a rally downtown yesterday for Democrats who wanted to get fired up about the presidential election and contribute to the campaign on a smaller scale. About 50 people attended the rally at Arroyo Park, 215 S. Ninth Ave., which included local politicians, the UA Young Democrats, and Sen. John Kerry supporters.

Dean, Vermont governor and former presidential candidate in the Democratic primaries, told attendees they could help John Kerry by supporting local leaders and voting.

"More voter turnout in Southern Arizona means more wins for Kerry and more wins for the Democratic Party," Dean said to cheering supporters, some with "Kerry-Edwards" signs.

He told UA students to encourage other students to go out and vote.

Dean endorsed Representative Raul Grijalva (D-Ariz.) and two politicians running for the Corporation Commission.

The Corporation Commission "adopts rules and regulations thereby functioning in a legislative capacity," according to the commission's Web site.

Dean said Grijalva is instrumental in helping Kerry win the electoral votes for Arizona.

"It depends on the people here, right here, right now," he said.

Dean also predicted the candidate who gets the most early votes in Arizona will win the electoral votes for the state. He encouraged the audience not only to vote, but to provide others with political information by talking to friends, volunteering at the Democratic headquarters and going door-to-door.

"The election is not in your hands, it is now in yours," Dean said.

Allison Cybulski, president of UAYD, said people can easily relate to Dean.

"Governor Dean is a very passionate public speaker," she said.

Dean said Cybulski painted multiple useful strategies for electing Kerry. She said students should talk to their friends about voting, then support the candidates.

Howard Dean speaks to the crowd after his speech yesterday evening at Arroyo Park. Dean spoke to a large group of kerry supporters, including several UA students. The rally was held at the event.

Mc Cain, Starky to debate at Gallagher

By Jennifer Amler
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

Students will have the chance to engage in national politics at a town hall debate on campus today.

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and Stuart Arling, his opponent in the primary election for the U.S. Senate, will square off today to discuss issues that affect college students.

The debate will be in Gallagher Theater at 4 p.m. and will have a town hall format similar to the presidential debate in St. Louis last week.

The goal of the debate is to discuss issues that affect college students.

"Our goal is to engage students in national politics," said Senator McCain, a former U.S. military officer and Arizona's only active politician.

"And our goal is to engage students in national politics," said Senator Arling, a former U.S. military officer and Arizona's only active politician.

Howard Dean warned to the crowd after his speech yesterday evening at Arroyo Park. Dean spoke to a large group of kerry supporters, including several UA students. The rally was held at the event.

First grocery store opens on campus

By Kylee Dawson
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

Students and staffs have a new place to dine and shop since the Highland Market, the first grocery store on campus, opened yesterday in the Highland Commons housing district.

In addition to produce and other health foods and beauty items, the market also includes an enclosed produce section, deli, salad bar and espresso bar.

The construction cost about $8 million, said Brian Dolan, UA facilities project manager and supervising officer of the Highland Market construction project.

The project was funded by the combined efforts of the Arizona Student Unions and Residence Life, said Dan Adams, director of Arizona Student Unions.

More than 150 were in attendance for the grand opening at 10 a.m., including several hall residents and staff members from Arizona Student Unions, Residence Life, Campus Health, administrators and others.

Though some Arizona Student Unions staff said they were concerned about the market opening, Dolan said the market will be well received by students.

Many students who live in the dorms said they are grateful the market has opened because of its convenience.

Kristen Lien, a mater student in engineering, said she and other students are grateful the market has opened because of its convenience.

It’s nice to have the option now to come here and buy a sandwich and a good meal," Lien said. "It’s a lot more than going to the other U-Mart on the student union.

Kylee Frese, an undeclared freshman, also lives at Villa Del Fuente and said having the First grocery store opens on campus

Students could have hard time finding flu shots

By Zach Colbeck
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

U students will have a difficult time obtaining a flu shot this week, as local and national supplies are running out.

Most of the nation’s remaining flu vaccine supply will be sent directly to facilities that serve children, the elderly and people with life-threatening illnesses.

Sofrito Arzio, executive director of the Arizona Health Department, said the state received only 50 percent of the shipment, but it was a big improvement over previous years, when about 50 percent of the nationwide supply was distributed.

"It’s not a lot," she said. "It’s a lot more than going to the other U-Mart on the student union.

Kylee Frese, an undeclared freshman, also lives at Villa Del Fuente and said having the First grocery store opens on campus

Students could have hard time finding flu shots

By Zach Colbeck
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

U students will have a difficult time obtaining a flu shot this week, as local and national supplies are running out.

Most of the nation’s remaining flu vaccine supply will be sent directly to facilities that serve children, the elderly and people with life-threatening illnesses.

Sofrito Arzio, executive director of the Arizona Health Department, said the state received only 50 percent of the shipment, but it was a big improvement over previous years, when about 50 percent of the nationwide supply was distributed.

"It’s not a lot," she said. "It’s a lot more than going to the other U-Mart on the student union.

Kylee Frese, an undeclared freshman, also lives at Villa Del Fuente and said having the First grocery store opens on campus

Students could have hard time finding flu shots

By Zach Colbeck
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

U students will have a difficult time obtaining a flu shot this week, as local and national supplies are running out.

Most of the nation’s remaining flu vaccine supply will be sent directly to facilities that serve children, the elderly and people with life-threatening illnesses.

Sofrito Arzio, executive director of the Arizona Health Department, said the state received only 50 percent of the shipment, but it was a big improvement over previous years, when about 50 percent of the nationwide supply was distributed.

"It’s not a lot," she said. "It’s a lot more than going to the other U-Mart on the student union.

Kylee Frese, an undeclared freshman, also lives at Villa Del Fuente and said having the