

ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT

Wednesday, September 11, 2002

wildcat.arizona.edu

Vol. 96 Issue. 12

University of Arizona, Tucson

Kidnapping attempt fails

BY DAVID HALPERIN
Staff Writer

A student was the victim of an attempted kidnapping Monday night, police said.

The 23-year-old student was riding her bike near North Euclid Avenue and East Elm Street at about 9:30 p.m. when the incident occurred. As she rode her bicycle, a man with blond hair driving a red sport utility vehicle stepped out of his car and tried to grab the student, said University of Arizona Police Department Commander Brain Seastone.

The man was unsuccessful in getting the student into his car, and the student was able to ride her bike away from the man, and contact police later.

Police stopped a car matching the suspect's vehicle description later that night. Officers took the student to identify the man, and she said she believed it was not the same man who attempted to abduct her, police said.

UAPD has not ruled him out as a suspect.

Police said they would make a report on the incident available today.

David Halperin can be reached at city@wildcat.arizona.edu.

Lifeline offers free cab rides

BY KAREN G. RAZ
Staff Writer

Students, staff and faculty who pick up one of the cards being passed out this week can get a cab ride home, to a hospital, shelter or police station for free this year. Student Lifeline — the company that supplied the cards largely by selling advertisements for them — provides cardholders with a toll free number to request a taxi ride. The cab fare and a tip is covered by the card, which has no limit.

Student government, the Associated Students of the University of Arizona, ordered 50,000 cards which they will begin distributing next week, said Adam Bronnenkant, ASUA senator in charge of the Lifeline program.

ASUA will begin distributing the cards in residence halls Monday. The ASUA senate will hand out cards

See LIFELINE, Page 9

In too deep

DAVID HARDEN/Arizona Daily Wildcat

A student walks carefully, trying to avoid getting soaked in the puddles that gathered yesterday all over campus after the rain.

It's Napolitano, Salmon

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Attorney General Janet Napolitano won the Democratic nomination for governor Tuesday while former U.S. Rep. Matt Salmon beat two rivals for the GOP nomination.

With 87 percent of precincts reporting, Napolitano had 58 percent of the vote in the Democratic race that also featured former Senate majority leader Alfredo Gutierrez, physician and ballot-drive organizer Mark Osterloh and physician Mike Newcomb.

Also with 87 percent of precincts reporting, Salmon had 56 percent of the vote, with the rest divided between Secretary of State Betsy Bayless and state Treasurer Carol Springer.

Libertarians Gary Fallon and Barry Hess were neck and neck in their primary.

Republicans' control of state government during the past decade and the state's current budget troubles will be an issue during the campaign, Napolitano said. "It's time for a change. Arizona needs new leadership."

Salmon said voters would have a "very clear choice" between himself and Napolitano, "a very liberal lawyer with a very different record."

Gutierrez, the Democratic runner-up, said he would not endorse any of the remaining candidates because none have pledged to avoid deep budget cuts in essential services by raising taxes. "This simply can't be about cuts," he said.

Bayless was the second-place finisher in the

See GOVERNOR, Page 10

REMEMBERS

A CAMPUS
Sept. 11: One Year Later

FILE PHOTO/Arizona Daily Wildcat

A student shares his emotions by writing on the Wall of Expressions last year. The wall was put up on the UA Mall as an outlet for students to have a way to express how they felt about the events of Sept. 11. It remained up for a month.

CAMPUS COMMEMORATES SEPTEMBER 11

•8:46 a.m. The Tucson Masterworks Choral will take part in a worldwide concert to honor those lost on Sep.11. The event is free — although donations will be accepted — and will take place in Centennial Hall.

•9 a.m. Flandrau Science Center's exhibit features a Wall of Remembrance and images of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon before the attacks.

•12 p.m. The Campus Commemoration of Sept. 11 will take place on the UA Mall featuring an address from Peter Likins and poetry readings from selected students. The bell from the USS Arizona will also toll five times in memory of the UA alumni who lost their lives on Sept. 11.

•12:05 p.m. The St. Thomas More Catholic Newman Center will host the first of three masses today at the Catholic Newman Center Chapel.

•12:30 p.m. The "Bio-Terrorism 2002" conference will take place at University Medical Center, Du Val Auditorium. Topics include smallpox, anthrax, water and food-borne pathogens and toxins.

•12:45 p.m. A Native American blessing ceremony will take place on the lawn of the Arizona State Museum.

•1:30 – 3:30 p.m. An exhibition featuring images of New York and Washington before the attacks titled "Yesterday and Today: A Portrait of NYC and Washington" will be available for viewing in the Center for Creative Photography.

•4 p.m. Graduate student Ryan Higgins will present and discuss his video project featuring Tucsonan's reactions to the Sept. 11 attacks. The event will take place in the Sociology building, Room 216.

•5 p.m. The University Religious Council is sponsoring a vigil and inter-faith service on the Mall.

•5:15 p.m. The Catholic Newman Center will host the second of three masses today at the Catholic Newman Center Chapel.

•9 p.m. The Catholic Newman Center will sponsor a "Moonlight Mass" on the Mall.

See Page 11 for a special retrospective section on the one-year anniversary of the attacks.